

Code of Conduct regarding FCSH's online media presence

The Faculty of Social Sciences and Humanities (FCSH) of the New University of Lisbon invites the members of its community to actively participate in social media.

All constructive suggestions will be welcomed and considered, as long as they are in keeping with the basic principles of use as set forth in this code of conduct.

Official social media presences are managed by FCSH, and updated in accordance with the criteria established by the Faculty.

1. Context posted by users on such pages is the unique and exclusive opinion of its author(s) and does not necessarily reflect the opinions or policies of the Faculty, such that FCSH does not accept any responsibility arising from its publication.
2. FCSH complies with the terms and conditions concerning the use of media which it has laid down and encourages all its active participants to also comply with these.
3. FCSH reserves the right to remove, where it sees fit, any comments of a fascist, sexist, abusive, violent (whether graphically or verbally), obscene nature, defamatory language and spam, which may constitute an illegal act, or contain false statements, be used out of context, or which channels, incites, threatens or directs attacks on any single individual or collective person.
4. Comments posted by profiles which are clearly or apparently false will be removed.
5. Messages of a commercial or promotional nature are not allowed, whether through the use of hyperlinks not previously approved by FCSH, or other means which violate the Terms and Conditions of any electronic medium where the Faculty has an official presence. We would appreciate and encourage members of our community to indicate any abusive content of which they are aware.
6. FCSH reserves the right to use any content posted by users on its social networks for institutional promotion.
7. FCSH warns that all images posted on its social networks may be subject to copyright, such that their use is subject to prior authorisation by the Faculty.
8. FCSH recommends that users of this space take the same precautions that they would do when utilizing any means of communication.

We would appreciate and appeal to members of our FCSH Community to help us create a dynamic and constructive Faculty presence within these social networks.
