to preserve the songs which accompany the stories. We should visit old ladies and old men and ask them to relate these stories to us while we write them down, and if we have recording machines, we should record them.

To hand them down to the next generation,
we should teach them to our school

action songs (then come the songs).

Those who know of some more of this type of songs could send them to me because I want to collect them. Others could also do the collecting job as well.

SOME TRADITIONAL TSONGA SONGS

By C. T. D. MARIVATE

We the Tsonga people have many folklore stories which are accompanied by lovely songs. But due to the influence of the radio, the evening round the hearth with the old lady relating folklore stories, is a rarity. That treasure is being lost. Its going away means our losing part of our Tsonga treasure. Today, only the old people know these folklores, and when they go (die), we shall be the more poorer if we do not try to store that treasure.

It is our duty as Tsongas today to try and preserve this treasure, more especially to preserve the songs which accompany the stories. We should visit old ladies and old men and ask them to relate these stories to us while we write them down, and if we have recording machines, we should record them.

To hand them down to the next generation, we should teach them to our school children. It will be the duty of the teacher to hand it down to the children because the children (most of them) do not have that same old opportunity of sitting with their grannies; so we the teachers should fight to preserve this treasure. The children, when grown up will hand same down to the next generation.

Here I shall write down a few such songs which could be taught to children. Not all of them are folklore songs, some are just traditional songs. Some are action songs (Then come the songs).

Those who know of some more of this type of songs could send them to me because I want to collect them. Others could also do the collecting job as well.
